We probably have the worst outbreak of European Corn Borer in 25 years and may be ever. Because of this, I'll use most of this space to relate to the problem.

Normally there are three generations of the corn borer in one growing season, and it's usually the second generation that causes the most damage.

No one can give a satisfactory explanation to why the abundance of this insect. It could be that snow and ice provided insulation from cold weather. It is possible that corn planted early prior to the heavy rains in late April attracted an excessive number of moths and thereby became a trap crop of sorts. There may be a combination of factors or even factors that I've not listed.

The question that we're getting is "Should we treat?" The answer depends on several considerations:

1. How large is the corn?

2. Will it have to be treated with an airplane?

3. How large are the majority of the corn borers and how deep are they into the whorls of the corn plants?

4. Will the corn be harvested for silage or grain?

Here's why these answers are important:

1. Large Borers deep in the corn plant are more difficult to kill.

2. Aerial application is more costly than ground application, but it is also safer.

3. The borer's major damage comes from weakening of the corn plant, making it more subject to lodging. The longer the plant stands, the greater the possibility of lodging. Severly infected fields should be selected for harvesting as silage - whether treated or not.

You can expect the second generation borers to begin appearing about mid-July. The moths will probably select late planted corn to deposit their eggs because it is more succulent.

With this background and remembering that historically the second generation is the biggest problem, I would point out that:

1. The first generation may or may not cause serious economic losses.

2. It is easy to apply a pesticide too late to be effective.

3. The best money may be spent on control of second generation borers on late planted corn.

4. At least 50% of the stand should be infected before considering treating.

5. The best results occur when treatment is applied when eggs are newly hatched and worms are small.

6. Another criteria for treating is when plant is two weeks before tasselling.

Now if treatment is to be made, what and how much? Currently we have label recommendations for Furadan granules or Diazinon granules. Test data would show a preference for Furadan.

By the time you read this, we hope to have an emergency label for Furadan 4F. Extreme care must be followed if you elect to use this with ground equipment.

Points to follow:

1. Use 1 quart Furadan per acre.

2. Use 3, preferably 4 to 5, gallons of water per acre when applying by air or 15 gallons per acre when applying with ground equipment.

3. There is a 30 day delay between application and harvest.

4. No more than two applications per season.

5. Do not use if more than 10 lbs. of Furadan 10G was used at planting time.

Fidelity American Bank Lends Local Farmer 'Helping Hand'

By Frances Paulette

Floyd (Buddy) Eggleston of Fidelity American Bank had a vacation from banking on Thursday (July 6th) of last week. One thing is certain, it was different from any other day in his entire life!

For the past few weeks Fidelity American has been running an ad about being a 'Helping Hand' to the farmers. The area farmers were invited to submit their names for a contest; the winner of the drawing would have the privilege of choosing a banker from Fidelity American Bank to help them on the farm for an entire day. Then the contest was over.

John Hix of the Hix Dairy Farm owned and operated in partnership with his brother William Hix of the Hixburg Community was the winner.

John Hix gave a lot of thought to his choice of a 'farm hand.' He considered choosing Roy Bennett or maybe Floyd Williams. But he said, "NO." Williams and Bennett both grew up on a farm and had experienced all the pleasures of farm life, (and the headaches!).

John, being a kind man, could not bear to think of Buddy Eggleston going all the way through life without at least one day of the joys of farm life. So Buddy was his choice.

Floyd Eggleston, born and reared in the city of Richmond knew absolutely nothing about farming. He told me he never even had any 'country' cousins - he could visit as he was growing up.

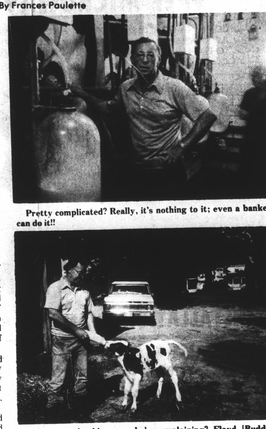
Don't you wish you could have seen our well-dressed banker as he entered the Hix Dairy barn at precisely 4:40 a.m.!

John Hix and his sons and his brother William and his son rotate the milking chores; it is quite a chore since they milk one hundred cows twice daily.

Buddy not only helped attach the milking machine to the cows udder; he shoveled manure and even did some repair work on the silage equipment.

David Hix, a son of John and Florence Hix, said, "Mr. Eggleston really caught on quickly. He did a little bit of everything and didn't seem to mind; he was quite a worker!"

Well, Buddy, seems like you have things pretty much under control. Anytime the pressures of banking get to be a bit too much, just grab a pair of jeans, hop in your car and let your nose lead you to the nearest dairy farm—after all, you know what it's all about!!



Pretty complicated? Really, it's nothing to it; even a banker can do it!

So it's not banking -- who's complaining? Floyd [Buddy] Eggleston seems to be enjoying himself and that calf doesn't mind who is holding the bottle!

GOOD NEWS FOR HOMEMAKERS

Pickle Know-How

(Note: This is the first in a series of two articles on pickle-making. The purpose of these two articles will be to answer your questions and help you be more successful with your pickle-making efforts during the summer.)

There are four categories of pickling: 1) Quick Processed Pickles - In this method of pickling vegetables are prepared, simmered in spiced vinegar or liquid, packed and processed. 2) Brined Pickles - Vegetables are prepared, soaked for several hours or overnight in a brine, then either packed, covered with boiling spiced vinegar and processed or simmered in the spice vinegar, packed and processed. Some pickles are in brine or cured for longer lengths of time, such as the 14-day method or the 21-day method of making the old fashioned type pickles. 3) Fruit Pickles - Examples of these are watermelon rind, cantaloupe, pumpkin, peaches and pears. These are simmered in a spicy sweet and/or sour liquid, packed and processed. 4) Relishes - A variety of vegetables that are chopped or coarsely ground are then simmered in a spiced vinegar liquid, packed and processed.

Pickle-making is quite an old art, and I say it is an art because you have your own special methods and own special recipes for making pickles. I would like to share with you some simple and short directions on how you can do the various types of pickles in your home with a high degree of success.

Use unwaxed cucumbers if you are purchasing them. It is best to select a variety of cucumber grown especially for pickle-making. Of course, this needs to be decided upon when you are planting your garden if you are growing your own, but if you are purchasing them, be sure to select a variety that is especially grown for the pickling processes.

White vinegar needs to be used for light colored pickles, for relishes and chutneys. Cider or malt vinegar is best for darker colored products. Vinegar serves two purposes in the pickle-making process - that of preserving the product and modifying its taste. The addition of water to vinegar solution weakens the vinegar as a preservative. If a less sour product is preferred, add sugar rather than decreasing the vinegar.

Do not reduce the amount of sugar or vinegar in any pickle recipe, since both are preservatives. In fact, you may increase the vinegar or sugar by small amounts if you prefer the pickle or relish to be less thick and sweeter.

When selecting the salt to use for a brine solution, use pure granulated pickling salt. Table salt has an anti-caking ingredient that will cause the brine to become cloudy. Iodized salt also causes pickles to darken. Pickling salt is also known as flake salt, kosher salt, dairy salt or cheese salt. It has a more pronounced flavor than ordinary salt. Do not confuse either coarse salt or pickling salt with what is called rock salt or ice cream salt. These two are sold for use in ice cream freezers only. They are coarse, but impure. Do not use these in your pickle-making process.

When handling your cucumbers, it is best for them to go straight from the picking to the pickling. This means that processing should start as soon as possible after picking or purchasing. If you cannot begin on your pickling immediately, spread your cucumbers out where they will be ventilated and cool.

It is extremely important to remove the blossom from cucumbers, and you may even want to snip the blossom end of the cucumber off when preparing. These blossom ends can be the source of enzymes responsible for soft pickles. Slightly underripe cucumbers retain their shape and texture better after being pickled. Do not use any fruits or vegetables for pickling that show evidence of mold. This can cause an off-flavor in the finished product and an inferior pickling job.

When handling fruits or vegetables for pickling, wash thoroughly in cold water to remove soil, but gently to avoid bruising. This, too, can cause problems in the later process. Avoid soaking produce of any kind, whether making pickles or using for table use. This causes a loss of flavor and a definite loss of nutrients.

Another important ingredient in the pickling process is the use of fresh spices. Old spices impart a musty taste to preserved foods. Be sure that your spices are fresh. A good method of always knowing how old your spices are is to date each can or container as you purchase them in the grocery store.

When putting pickles in brine, use large stoneware, glass, pottery or unchipped enamelware containers for recipes that will remain in vinegar or brine solution for any length of time. For cooking where will need unchipped enamelware, aluminum or stainless steel sauce pot deep enough so liquid will not boil over. Never use copper, brass, iron or galvanized utensils. These metals will react with acid and salt in the pickling liquid and cause undesirable color changes or can even form hazardous compounds.

Next week I will be writing about some common causes of pickling problems.

Should you have a homemaking question or problem, please call or write the Appomattox County Extension Office. Our telephone number is 352-8244 and our P. O. Box is 488.
